

Enduring Principles That Unite Parents And Educators

Parents and educators play crucial roles in a child's development. Both share the common goal of providing a positive and nurturing environment for children to grow, learn, and succeed. While there may be occasional differences in approach, there are several enduring principles that both parents and educators strongly believe in and strive to uphold.

1. Collaboration and Communication: Effective collaboration between parents and educators is essential for a child's success. Open lines of communication help ensure that both parties are aware of the child's progress, challenges, and needs. Regular meetings, whether in person or virtually, allow for constructive dialogue and the development of a shared understanding of the child's educational journey.

2. Individualized Education: Every child is unique with their own set of strengths, weaknesses, and interests. Parents and educators recognize the importance of tailoring education to meet the individual needs of each child. By understanding and accommodating a child's learning style, teachers and parents can optimize their learning experiences, promote engagement, and foster a love for learning.

3. Positive Reinforcement: Encouragement and positive reinforcement play a crucial role in a child's motivation and self-esteem. Parents and educators understand the importance of recognizing a child's achievements, whether big or small, and providing constructive feedback. By focusing on strengths and celebrating progress, children are motivated to continue their growth and development.

4. Holistic Development: Parents and educators recognize that education goes beyond academic achievement. They value the holistic development of a child, which includes social, emotional, and physical well-being. Creating a supportive and inclusive environment fosters the growth of well-rounded individuals who are equipped to navigate the challenges of life.

5. Lifelong Learning: Parents and educators understand that learning is a lifelong journey. They value the importance of instilling a love for learning in children that extends beyond formal education. By nurturing curiosity, critical thinking skills, and a growth mindset, parents and educators empower children to become independent learners who are eager to explore and discover the world around them.

6. Respect and Empathy: Parents and educators believe in fostering a culture of respect and empathy. They model these values in their interactions with children, teaching the importance of treating others with kindness and understanding. By instilling these principles, parents and educators enable children to develop strong interpersonal skills and cultivate meaningful relationships.

7. Continuous Improvement: Both parents and educators understand the importance of continuous improvement. They acknowledge that education is an ever-evolving field, and staying up-to-date with research and best practices is essential. By embracing ongoing professional development and seeking opportunities for growth, parents and educators ensure that they provide the best possible education and support for the children in their care.

These enduring principles serve as a foundation for collaboration between parents and educators, enhancing the educational experience and overall well-being of children. By working together and upholding these shared beliefs, parents and educators can shape a brighter future for the next generation.

Shared Ideals in Public Schools Enduring Principles that Unite Parents and Educators FREE ON KINDLE FROM APRIL 25, 2022 - APRIL 29, 2022 By Tom Deighan

A great public education is the key to the American Dream and our nation's continued success, but in a political climate empowered by the contrived division of parents and educators, we must rediscover shared values. Shared Ideals in Public Schools examines the enduring principles that bind parents and educators together every day at the kid-level in their local public schools:

- The Parent-Teacher Partnership
- Local Control
- Parental Rights
- Faith-Welcoming Schools

- Safety and Security
- Relevant and Rigorous Academics
- Adult-Ready Graduates
- Equal Rights and Equal Opportunity
- No Hidden Agendas or Indoctrination
- Transparency and Accountability
- Public Schools and Community
- And more . . .

Before we can find Shared Values, however, we must expose the Educational Spin Cycle that pits parents and educators against each other for political gains. Here are a few new terms to consider:

Flaming Pennies . . . Troll Razors . . . Cable News Goggles . . . Gotham City Shades . . . Pollyanna Public Schools . . . Evil Public Schools . . . Classroom Smackdowns . . . High Noon Strangers . . . 3rd Graders Hitting the Bubbly!

Not familiar concepts? Perhaps they should be as we attempt to illustrate the behavior of extreme partisans from both sides of the political aisle. Far-away radicals increasingly force parents and educators to choose between either a progressive march toward Marxism or a progressive march toward crony capitalism. Local parents and educators rarely hold such extreme views, but when extreme choices are our only options, everyone becomes an extremist.

Once we understand these forces and tactics, local parents and educators can reassert the enduring principles that have historically united them at the kid-level, regardless of their political affiliations. Together, local parents and educators can cooperatively navigate the toughest issues. This includes potentially controversial issues like religious expression, age-inappropriate issues, school choice, hidden agendas, and even Critical Race Theory.

Local parents and educators know their own students' needs better than far-away strangers from Washington D.C. or Capital City. Thankfully, rational parents and educators still comprise the majority, so we must rediscover Shared Ideals in Public Schools, while we still can. . . for the sake of our children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren . . . and for the sake of this great nation.

Author Tom Deighan illustrates the absurdity overwhelming American Public Schools in an attempt to amuse, unify, and equip post-pandemic parents and educators still clinging to Shared Ideals in Public Schools at the local level.
