This book answers the question how companies (whether based in Singapore or abroad, large or small, startups or established businesses) can raise millions of dollars by issuing digital tokens in 2020 using the advantages offered by Singapore as a leading global hub for cryptocurrency and blockchain projects.

In February 2020, Bitcoin rebounded to the USD 10'000 price level, setting the scene for another bull market across all cryptocurrencies. With a widely expected BTC price target of USD 100'000 within the next 24 months, the market is preparing for a new wave of capital raising through the creation and sale of digital tokens. Compared to the ICO wave of 2017/2018, the industry has significantly matured. 2020 offers exciting new opportunities based on a well-formed regulatory framework in Singapore.

The author, Dr. Alexander Ressos, is an international finance lawyer based in Singapore and Hong Kong. Widely acknowledged as a "first tier" specialist in crypto finance and investments, the author has extensive experience from hundreds of token sale projects structured through Singapore. His expertise in this niche practice area extends from legal and tax structuring to transactional advice and ongoing support, legal opinions, company incorporation, bank account opening and local director services. Dr. Alexander Ressos holds a Ph.D. in capital markets law.
