Each year eight pseudo professionals leave behind their wives for a nude canoeing trip where the alcohol flows and boys will be boys. The Upper Iowa River isn't always kind to those seeking a gentle paddle in the nude. At least it wasn't this year, where four men found themselves naked and afraid, churning in the rapids, before limping back to camp with nothing left but their bodies. Literally.

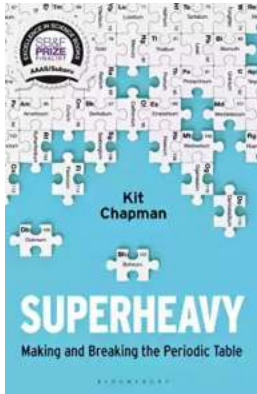

The Nude Canoeists of the Upper Iowa is a short read called "the funniest canoeing story of all-time" by readers of the advanced release.

Author JD Myers is a veteran print journalist, whose writing had been published by seven newspapers and four magazines. He is a former national essay contest winner who lives and writes in the Midwest.
